WINNSBORO' July 22, 1867. Editor of Taily News:

I have a few words to say about railroads, and in writing them I only aim at correction of abuses and of bad manners. The cars on our roads are many of them elegant and comfortable, and all of them, so far as I and careful generally, and attentive to their busicess. But there is a nuisance they do not abate and which is a cause of annoyance to many gentlemen's car. He has paid for a first-class ticket, but is placed in a second-class car, for it is well understood that when out of the ladies' cars men will indulge in things which are not permitted in them. They not only smoke—very often miserable tobacco—but will frequently stick their miserable tobacco—but will frequently stick their miserable tobacco—but will frequently stick their resolved, that with the means now in our possession, and the well-founded expectation of help from our friends, we would set about at once to establish a school with the well-form septembers. boots on top of the backs of the seats or out of boots on top of the backs of the seats or out of tablish a school, which, by the well-known schol the window, and not unfrequently against the neck, hand or back of those who are sitting before them. Now this can all be easily corrected to the improvenent of comfort and the corrections of bad habits or careless manners. Let ladies and gentlemen occupy cars indiscriminately, and then enforce proper rules. ADDRESS OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

the Members and Friends of the Froestant Emiscopal hurch, and to all loyers of sound learning, and of the bligious training of the young, within the Dioceses of forth Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Ala arma, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkanssa and nnessee, greeting: Friends and Brethren:

Tennessee, groung.

Pear Friends and Brethren:

It was a favorite saying of our beloved Bishop Polk, that "A great thought never dies." And it cannot be doubted that this conviction brightened the last trying years of his life, with regard to the Institution which he so nobly projected, and mainly assisted in commencing at this place.

It is now a little more than ten years since that great and good man first called the attention of his brothern in the Episcopal Office to the urgent need in our Southern States of a University of the highest order, conducted under the sacred sancsions of religion; and clearly pointed out how justby the obligations of patriotism demanded of the Church that she should place at the service of our

is the obligations of patriotism demanded of the Church that she should place at the service of our country the whole of her strength for the intellectual and moral training of her youth. For as every well-governed State secures liberty and protection to its citizens in the exercise of their religion; so should they in their turn, both in their individual and ecclesiastical capacity, do all in their power to uphold her just authority by an enlightened patriotism, and the diffusion of sound intellectual and moral sentiments.

It was accordingly proposed that the several Dioceses of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee, should unite in founding, on the most enlarged and liberal scale, an Institution which should not only lead our youth along the highest walks of literature and science, but train them in the higher and holier ways of religious knowledge; and send forth, year by year, a corps of instructors; to dispense through our whole beloved South the benefits of their own sound attainments and superior religious training. It was further proposed, that this Institution, while opening its doors to all, should be under the sole direction and control of the Protestant Episcopal Church. For experience had fully proved that no educational enterprise had ever flourished for any length of time, without being upheld by the State, or else taken under the patronage of some religious denomination. Though many Schools and Colleges were at that time dotting our soil from the Rappahannock to the Rio Grands, it was, nevertheless, thought that there was ample room for another, especially one of a higher order, which from its superior advantages, might prove the fruitful p rent of many others of lower degree, which from its superior advantages, might prove the fruitful purent of many others of lower degree, and thus unfluse its manifold blessings through the length and breadth of our land. This proposed undertaking met with the cor-dial and ready approval of the Church, and of thousands of others, who longed to see a higher standard of education, and of religious obligation standard of education, and of religious obligation set up among us. Trustees were promptly appointed by each Diocese to represent its interests, and aid in putting the scheme in operation. In order to secure the cheerful co-operation of every portion of the Church, these Trustees were selected equally from both the Clerical and Lay Orders, and made the guardians of such sums as might be contributed by their respective Dioceses. and made the guardians of such sums as might be contributed by their respective Dioceses.

The first question of any difficulty was the selection of the best site for the proposed institution. The objects most to be desired in such a location were in the first place healthfulness; then an abundant supply of the necessaries of life; and thirdly, a position easy of access, and as nearly central as possible to the several Dioceses engaged in the enterprise. After a friendly competition between several localities, each of which presented many of the desired advantages, the present site was fixed upon, which is a plateau which presented many of the desired advantages, the present site was fixed upon, which is a plateau or piece o table land in Franklin County, Tennessee, near the Southern termination of the Cumberland range. On this mountain top—an elevation of 850 feet above the adjacent country, and 2000 above the sea-there were found, by the commis sioners appointed for the purpose, more advan-tages than could reasonably have been looked for in any one place. A solid body of land, nine thou-sand acres in extent, was cheerfully given to us and acres in extent, was cheerfully given to us; in the centre of which, far removed from the ordi-nary temptations and annoyances of most literary institutions, our University buildings were to institutions, our University buildings were to be placed. If to the advantages of this extensive domain there be added the accessibleness of its position, the cheapness and abundance of the necessaries of life, an almost total exemption from the prevailing diseases of our climate an invigorating atmosphere, numerous and unfailing springs of freestone, limestone, and chalvbeate waters, a variety of magnificent prospects; overlooking fertile valleys, thriving villages, rocky gleus, extensive woodlands, and learful precipices; and moreover, a pleasant soil, with a gently undulating surface, abounding with a variety of a gently undulating surface, abounding with every variety of material for building purposes; if all this be put together it will convincingly appear

It had been wisely determined from the first, that the principal of our subscription list should ever remain untouched, and the interest only be used for building and other purposes. But, is the present impoverished condition of our Southhave seen, are good. The conductors are polite ern country, we find it impossible to collect even the interest on the remnant of our subscription list, while an impatient public is urging us to who travel on these roads. This is the constant smoking in what is called the "gentlemen's car." When a gentleman is travelling without ladies he he is told by the conductor to take his seat in the gentlemen's car. He has paid for a first-class than one hundred pupils, together with a competition of their sons. What can we do, then, but appeal to that same public to come forward, and help us at once to erect such buildings as may, in a plain way, accommodate, at the outset, not less than one hundred pupils, together with a competition.

pcedily assume a collegiate form, and in time ex-and itself into the magnificent proportions of our proposed University.

This "High School of the University," as it will be called, we aim to put in operation by the commencement of the next year, if not at an earlier period. But in order thus to meet the demands of an impatient public, we require twenty-five or fifty thousand dollars in hand for the erection of addiional buildings with their necessary furniture. There is already on the ground a commodions edi-ice for the accommodation of a Theological School and its Professors; and all additional buildings neand its Professors; and all additional buildings ne-cessary for the successful beginning of our "High School" could be easily erected within the present year, at a cost not exceeding either of the above mentioned sums. With a view to obtain that amount, the Right Reverend Bishop of Ton-nessee, who is also the Vice-Chancellor of the University, was authorized and requested by the Reard to rules suplication, as seen a possible to Conductors should see that perfect order and propriety is observed, and then all men will, outwardly at least, be gentlemen in the cars. Another evil of no small magnitude exists, which ought to be corrected. A lady will often appropriate four seats for herself, buckets, bundles, shawls, &c., when whe her resilf for one only and these she parties this many a partie of the cars. These faithful and zealous agents of our Board we now beginning to commend to your confidence and your liberal aid. Upon that aid many a parties of the cars. rent is this moment hanging his hopes of soon finding for his sons that sound instruction, that paternal oversight, and that moral and religious culture which the Church can best provide for them. For we trust that we are not assuming too much in saying, that when we propose to found, for the promotion of sound learning, and under the vigilant guardianship of our holy reli-gion, an institution of the highest grade, open to all, there is in our people, generally, such a condence in the intelligence and stability of the Church, her well-known conservation and truly evan-fast adherence to what is primitive and truly evan-called in religion, as to secure to us the good will Church, her well-known conservatism and steadgelical in religion, as to secure to us the good will, and even the patronage of many outside of her

Our work may even now be said to be begun. For in the confident expectation of your generous aid, several building sites have already been selected, and the noise of the workman's hammer is hourly breaking the atillness of our forests. Six or eight private residences will be ready for their occupants before the arrival of the summer heats: and we are looking with pleasing anticipation to a day not far distant, when, in the language of one of our Northern brethren, "This mountain-top will become the intellectual and social centre of the South, the seat of refinement, culture, elegance South, the seat of refinement, culture, elegance, and all the graces of life, overspread by that refining, elevating, and most enduring of all good influences—the 'beauty of holiness;' where learning and religion, those Heaven-allied spirits, which no man should eyer 'put asunder,' shall, day by day, shed their benign and hallowed influence on all around; where the enfeebled frame of the lowlands may be braced by our invigorating atmosphere, and families of moderate ability, by making it their residence may rean the advantages of economy. very much. He handled the subject with skill and eloquence, much to the satisfaction of his large audience. There is a bad habit in some of our country congregations which ought to be corrected.

University Place, April 10, 1867. University Place, Tenn., June 29, 1867.

To Rev. John H. Cornish:

DEAR SIE: On the recommendation of Bishop Quintard, I hereby appoint you as an agent to solicit, in South Carolina and the neighboring Dioceses, subscriptions and contributions in aid of the "University of the South."

Bishop Quintard has, no doubt, informed you of the pressing need we are under at this time, in order to prepare for a favorable opening of our 'High School" in the Fall. Relying with confidence in your faithful execu-tion of this trust, and praying for your success in this and all good works,

I remain, yours in Christ,

|From the LaCrosse Democrat.1 omething for the Admirers of Base Ball, DESCRIPTION OF IT BY BRICK POMEROY. AS A BASE BALLIST.

Look at that brace of hands, once soft and pretty, now suffused with Egyptian blushes. Look into those optics and tell us tales of sympathy. And look at that Mount Tom on our right cheek And look at that mount from on our right cheek bone. Base ball! That is the row.

It came about thus. Secondary deployment is too shirksome on the system. The doctor said we needed exercise. Doctor knows. He told us to join base ball; we joined. Bought a book of injoin base ball; we joined. Bought a book of in-structions, and for five days studied it wisely, if not too well. Then we bought a sugar-scoop cap, a red belt, a green shirt, yellow trousers, pumpkin colored shoes, a paper collar and purple neck-tio, and, with a lot of other delegates, woved gently to the ground.

There were two nines. These nines were antag-There were two nines. These nines were antagonists. The ball is a pretty liftle drop of softness, the size of a goose egg, and five degrees harder than a brick. The two nines play against each other. It is a quiet game, much like chess, only a little more chase than chess.

There was an umpire. His position is a hard one. He sits on a box and yells "feul." His duty

I took the bat. It is a murderous plaything, descended from Pocthontas to the head of John Smith. The man in front of me was a pitcher. He was a nuce pitcher, but he sont the balls hot. The man behind me was a catcher. He caught it, too!

The umpire said "play." It is the most radical play I know of, this base ball. Sawing cord wood is moonlight rambles beside base ball. So the pitchers sent a ball toward me. It looked pretty coming; so I let it come. Then he sent another. I hit it with the club, and hove it gently upward. Then I started to walk to the first base. The ball this interest which had a grade sampledly said. lit in the pitcher, or his hands, and somebody said he caught a fly. Alas, poor fly! I walked leisurely toward the base. Another man took the bat. I turned to see how he was making it, and a mule kicked me on the cheek. The man said it was the ball. It felt like a mule, and I reposed on the grass. The ball west on! grass. The ball went on!

Protty soon there were two more flies, and three of us flew cut. Then the other nine came in, and us nine went out. This was botter. Just as I was standing on my dignity in the left field, a hot ball, as they called it, came skyrocketing toward me. My captain yelled, "Take it!"

I hastened gently forward to where the ball was me. My captain yelled, "Take it!"
I hastened gently forward to where the ball was

I hastened gently forward to where the ball was aiming to descend. I have good eye to measure distances, and saw at a glance where the little aerolite was to light. I put up my hands. How sweetly the ball descended. Everybody looked—I felt something warm in my eye! "Muffin!" yelled nine'y fellers. "Muffin be d—d! It's a cannon ball!" For three days I've had two pounds of raw beef on that eye, and yet it paineth!

Then I wanted to go home, but my gentle captain said "nay." So I nayed and stayed. Pretty soon it was my strike. "Brick to bat!" yelled the umpire. I went, but not all serene as was my wont. The pitcher sont in one hip high. I missed it. He sent in another neck high. It struck me in the gullet. "Fol!" yelled the umpire. He sent

"go it!" "home run!" "go round again!" or "go round a dozen times!" Base ball is a sweet little game. When it came my turn to bat again, I noticed everybody move back about ten rods! The new umpire retreated twelve rods. He was timid! The pitcher sent 'em in hot. Hot balls in time of war are good. But I don't like 'em too hot for fun. war are good. But I don't like 'em too hot for fun. After a while I got a fair clip at it, and you bet it went, cutting the daisies down the right field. A fat man and his dog sat in the shade of an oak effoying the game. The ball broke one leg of the dog and lande i, like a runaway engine, in the corporosity of the fat man. He was taken home to die. Then I went on a double-quick to the field, and tried to stop a hot ball. It came toward me from the bat at the rate of nine miles a minute: I put may hade the ball went excellering on its up my hands, the ball went sweetly singing way with all the skin from my palms with it

More raw beef! That was an eventful chap who first invented pase ball. It's such fun. I've played five games, and this is the result:

Twenty-seven dollars paid out for things. One bunged eye, badly bunged. One broken little finger. One bump on the head. Nineteen lame backs.

A sore jaw. One thumb dislocated. Three sprained ankles.
Five swelled legs.
One dislocated shoulder from trying to throw a ball a thousand yards.

Two hands raw from trying to stop hot balls.

A lump the size of a hornet's nest on the left hip, well back. hip, well back.

A nose sweetly jammed, and five uniforms spoiled from rolling in the dirt at the bases.

I have played two weeks, and don't think I like the game. There is not a square inch on, in, or under me, but aches. I sleep hights dreaming of hot balls, "fiys," "fouls," and descending "skyrockets." I never worked so hard since Ruth stole wheat, and never was so lame since the burning of Luther.

But I am proud of my proficiency in the game.

It's fine exercise—a little easier than being run through a threshing machine, and not much either. It's a nice game for a poet or orator—'t will make one sore beyond all accounts.

re looked over the scorer's book, and find that in two weeks I've broken seven bats, made one tally, broken one umpiro's jaw, broken ten windows in adjoining bouses, killed a baby, broke the leg of a dog, and mortally injured the bread-basket of a spectator, knocking five other players out of time by slinging my bat. and knocked the waterfall from a school marm who was standing twenty rods from the field, a quiet looker-on.

I've used up fifteen bottles of arnica liniment, five bottles of lotions, half a raw beef, and am so full of pain that it seems as i my bones were but broken hats, and my legs the limbs of a dead horse chestnut, instead of the once elegant trotters of Bawlingly thine, cumstances well calculated to fill us with sadness. Scarcely a fortnight has passed since our President sat at the head of our social board, at once assisting us with the wisdom of his counsels, and giving additional zest to our enjoyment. To-night we are called to mourn hi oss, and to pay the last honors to his memory.

For many years James K. Robinson had "gone in and out" in the presence of this community, and had won for himself no small share of its confidence and respect. Carefully trained from his earliest youth in the best school, he hal become a worthy representative of his class—the Charleston Merchant, whose integrity was beyoud question; whose word was his bond. His exce lent judgment, his fidelity in the discharge of his duties, his business character and habits, had placed him in positions of trust and responsibility.

Having amassed for himself an ample fortune, and be ing possessed of full leisure and opportunity, he could not resist the claims of our Society, when, with remarkable unanimity, he was called to he its President. His administration was most successful. During the troubled period of the war he preserved our organization, and, ecturn of peace—owing mainly to his exertions and innence-our Society to-day stands as prosperous as ever. We can all bear testimony to his courteous discharge of the duties of the Chair: to the unwavering and faith ful care with which he protected and fostered all the interests of our Society, and to his unfaltering devotion to its welfare. A YOUNG LADY RETURNING TO HER country home, after a sojourn of a few months in the city, was hardly recognized by her friends. In place oa coarse, rustic, flushed face, she had a soft ruby complexion of almost marble smoothness, and instead of tw nty-three she really appeared but eighteen. Upon inquiry as to the cause of so great a change, she plainly told them that she used the CIRCASSIAN BALM, and considered it an invaluable acquisition to any lady's tollet. By its use any Lady or Gentlemen can improve their personal appearance an hundred fold. It is simple in its combination, as Nature herself is simple, yet unsurpass ed in its efficacy in drawing impurities from, also healing, cleansing and beautifying the skin and complexion. By its directaction on the cuticle it draws from it all its impurities, kindly healing the same, and leaving the surface as Nature intended it should be—clear, soft, smooth and beautiful.
